

It's the finer detail that makes a product great

Since 1980 Defremm SpA – a cold forming manufacturer located in the north of Italy – has been designing and making special parts to customer drawings, as well as producing standard fasteners such as blind rivets and rivet nuts.

At Fastener Fair Stuttgart Defremm will present its product range of small metal parts for a range of highly specialised applications. These include fasteners for brakes, locks, doors, roof systems and engines in the automotive industry. The company also makes parts for household appliances as well as fittings for plumbing, window and door frames, sports equipment and general mechanical applications.

Materials used to produce parts from 5mm to 90mm in length include carbon steel, aluminium alloy, copper, brass and stainless steel wire in diameters from 2mm to 18mm.

Now, thanks to the constant improvement in technology and the efforts of Defremm's R&D team, the company is increasingly focusing its energy on cold forming solutions in stainless steel.

To meet increasingly complex customer requirements, and to increase its production capacity, Defremm has invested heavily in state of the art multistage horizontal heading machines and machinery for recovery, threading, punching, turning and assembly.

Since 2003, Defremm has been certified to ISO TS 16949 and its new selection of machinery and calibration equipment ensure the highest standards of quality control to satisfy customer requirements.

"Our experienced team carries out technical and feasibility studies to co-design products together with clients. We then design and build the necessary tooling in our own workshop to manufacture initial samples and start standardised production. We constantly strive to improve our production processes and service, developing quality products and professional customer care in order to create opportunities and increase value over time for all involved."
